NOVEMBER 1, 2005, EDMOND, OKLAHOMA. WeatherBank, Inc., a leader in the weather services industry, announced today that it has received notice from the United States Patent Office that four (4) recent U. S. Patent Applications have been allowed. These new Patents deal with the wireless transmission of content to end-users, or what's known as Location Based Services, or simply "LBS." These new Patents broaden the claims of the Company's earlier Patents in its Interactive Weather Advisory System and its Interactive Advisory System.

"These four Patents should be published by the Patent Office by the end of this year," said Michael and Steven Root, twin brothers, co-inventors of the Patent, and WeatherBank's Executive Vice President/CFO, and President/CEO, respectively.

"These new Patents brings the total to eight (8) U. S. Patents owned by WeatherBank dealing with LBS," explained Michael Root. He further went on to quote that more information on these Patents will be available once they publish. WeatherBank has also filed for Patent protection in most of the industrialized countries throughout the world.
